REED DID NOT MAKE ANY STATEMENT

DENIES STORY QUOTING HIM AS PREDICTING PARTY DEFEAT IN STATE.

WILL GIVE VIEWS LATER

Meanwhile Repudiated Senator Is Mum —Nodaway County Delegates Home Last Night.

According to a staff correspondent of the Kansas City Times, Senator James A. Reed repudiated flatly and completely an interview carried by one of the press associations which purported to give his views on the action of the Democratic state convention at Joplin in which he was quoted as saying Missouri would go Republican from 75,000 to 10,000. He said he had said nothing whatever and would say nothing until he had heard from his friends in Missouri, who had attended the convention. Then, he said, he would make a statement covering the situation and his intentions.

In the resolutions adopted by the convention, the following endorsement of the League of Nations was made:

We favor the plan for the promotion of the peace of the world by the establishment of the league of nations, And we favor the ratification of the treaty of peace, including the League of Nations, without reservations which tend to weaken or nullify the provisions of the covenant and the purposes of the league. We accept the assurance of the President of the United States that the covenant, as drawn, amply protects the constitutional provileges of congress, and is not subversive of any purely American interest, yet such is our devotion to the principles of the league that we are willing to accept the ratification of the treaty including the league covenant, with such reservations as do not impair or vitiate in the least degree the primary object of the covenant. We denounce, however, the refusal of Senator Lodge and other Republican chieftains in the senate to accept the terms of ratification indicated by the President and his supporters in the senate as effectually safeguarding American rights and likewise preserving the great aim of the League of Nations. We instruct the Missouri delegation to the Democratic national convention to vote as a unit for the adoption of a platform approving the League of Nations without destructive reservations upon the part of the senate."

A number of the Nodaway County delegates to the convention returned home last night.

SPRING MONTHS TORNADO WEATHER

FORECASTER SAYS SIX A SEASON IS THE AVERAGE.

350 DEAD IN 2 STORMS

Mississippi Valley Is Breeding Ground For the Twisters, Says Chief of U. S. Weather Bureau.

Washington, April 24—Watch out for tornadoes, is the advice Prof. Harry Frankenfield, chief forecaster of the United States weather bureau has for inhabitants of the Mississippi Valley. Three hundred and fifty persons have been killed in two tornadoes this spring, one March 27 and one April 20.

"The tornado menace is becoming more serious because of the rapid increase in population," Professor Frankenfield said today. He explained that the Mississippi Valley is subject to more tornadoes than any other part of the world. Practically all of those occur in the three spring months.

"The cause in all cases," Professor Frankenfield said, "is meeting of moist warm winds from the southeast and cold winds which come from the northwest. It is a case of spring and summer clashing.

"When there is an area of low pressure between the two winds, where the air is quiet, the warm and cold winds come together suddenly, the warm air rises and the cold air rushes underneath, creating a terrific retary motion which is increased by the rotation of the earth.

"That is the way the tornadoes this spring were formed. The first one, March 27, which killed 175 persons, was spread over parts of territory from Michigan to Georgia. The reason was the wide area over which there was little circulation of air. There was a gigantic trough in the air in which it was sultry. Then the cold northwest and the warm, moist southeast winds came together. In the storm Tuesday the area of low pressure was smaller, so the tornado did not strike in so many states.

"The usual season has at least six tornadoes, but most of these in the past have struck places where population is light. With the country developing rapidly, the amount of damage and number of lives lost is becoming serious."

So Perkins still retains the honor of being the biggest Postmaster in the United States.—Barnard Bulletin.

What the General Leasing Act Means to the Whole American Nation.

By F. K. LANE, Retiring Secretary of the Interior.

©, Western Newspaper Un

The General Leasing act, just approved by President Wilson, should be a vital factor in decreasing living costs through its influence on the prices of the basic necessities, coal, oil, gas and phosphates for fertilizer. Productions of these raw materials will be vastly increased as a result of the throwing open of millions of acres of public lands made possible by the law.

Under the law, any citizen of the United States, or of any country which extends reciprocity to the United States, may prospect on lands described in the law and, on discovery, obtain a lease which will entitle him to remove from these lands mineral wealth they now contain in return for a royalty paid to the United States.

This royalty, ranging in rate from 5 per cent upward, is expected to yield between $9,000,000 and $10,000,000 a year to the government.

Under the law, mineral lands thrown open to prospectors include 6,000,000 acres of possible oil lands, 40,000,000 acres of coal lands and 2,500,000 acres of phosphate lands.

Farmers and consumers thus are directly interested in the law. Phosphate now is selling at unheard of prices, which makes an unusual burden for the farmer to carry. He must pass this burden along to the consumer in fixing prices for his products.

The demand for oil for months has exceeded production. This has increased the price in an unusual degree. Gasoline also has gone up in price, partly as a result of the increased price of oil. An increase in oil production, therefore, should tend to reduce the price, not only of oil itself, but of gasoline, which will reduce trucking costs and have a general tendency to reduce living costs.

The opening to development and use of the vast areas of coal will particularly affect that part of the United States west of the Mississippi river by providing an opportunity for manufacturing, including development of iron and steel resources of the West.

The act is a radical departure from the old mining laws, in that it retains the title to the lands and deposits to the United States, but gives developers an opportunity to work without the large initial investment necessary to buy the lands or deposits, paying for them on a royalty basis as production occurs, while at the same time the government retains such a measure of control as will tend to prevent waste, improper mining and withholding the resources from use.

Husbands Lacking, What Will Be the Effect on Women of the World?

By DR. CONSTANCE LONG, English Physician.

The emotional problem, the problem created by the fact that something like ten millions of men lost their lives in the war, is one of the supreme questions which must be faced in summing up war's effect upon women. To say just what will happen is difficult, but it is certain that millions who would have married cannot do so under today's conditions.

Women will have to find their own way out. Emotions which might have been expressed in marriage will have to be diverted. One of the conditions which have kept women inferior has been the fact that they were dependent upon men for their happiness. However natural and necessary this may have been up to a certain point it must not now be considered a tragedy if woman finds new values in herself. She will be forced also to find equivalent values in other directions. Changes therefore are inevitable and we must not be too ready to say what is right and what is wrong.

The banked up energy which would naturally be expressed in marriage will find effective expression. It won't be wasted. It has been said that women have not in times past made great artists nor first rate scientists. We may have come to the time when they will begin to do big things.

Some one has said that "what the world needs is a generation of single women." That means that the world needs feminine energy devoted to creative purposes and not entirely absorbed in married life.

This is not to say that married life should be underrated or robbed of the genius that it needs. It is to emphasize that the whole of life is not included in marriage, and that the war, having brought about unnatural conditions, affords woman an opportunity to adapt her sex and her power to making a new status for herself.

Need of Good English Is Growing as Whole World Turns to Its Use.

By HARVEY M. WATTS.

Since English is rapidly becoming a universal world language, with American English as the determining form of it, it behooves us to take our mother tongue somewhat more seriously. Those who use English as a matter of earning their daily bread should leave nothing undone to help all those influences in the school and out of it that make for sound and precise speech.

The situation is a curious one and is full of paradoxes. Everywhere there is a complaint of slovenly English, and the schools are bitterly attacked, sometimes without warrant, for not turning out those who, at least, know the three R's, "readin', ritin' and 'rithmetic." There is no question that these lacks exist and that the business world and the schools and colleges are sorely troubled by the down-at-the-heels and careless use of language.

The situation is not so hopeless as one might think from the confessions of schools and colleges and the plaints of pedagogues. For there is a corrective influence at work of almost universal application; at work by means of conscious and unconscious imitation, and that is the American newspaper and the American periodical press taken as a whole.

In America the great determining factor in the formation of American speech is the daily newspaper. There is no question about it that in the matter of directness of diction, clearness of expression and general all around collectiveness in conveying any given idea the language used in the reportorial, editorial and advertising columns of the American newspaper is the best English going.

ANIMAL LIFE AND CLIMATE

Abundant Proof That Extremes of Temperature Do Not Preclude Possibility of Existence.

The contention of Dr. Abbott of the Smithsonian astrophysical observatory that because of the cold climate of Mars life could not exist upon that planet is not convincing.

Polar bears rejoice in temperatures so low that little vegetation at any time of the year exists in the latitudes in which they are found. The existence of tigers in Korea, which has a New England climate, supposedly changed by sea currents when the country's fauna was tropical, shows how animals common to the hottest parts of the earth adapt themselves to climate as cold by comparison with the tropics as the climate of Mars is by comparison with the regions in which the Eskimos live. Monkeys from Africa died as fast of inherited illnesses in heated houses that the mortality rate forced an experiment, as the result of which African monkeys are living out of doors all the year in one of Chicago's parks.

If life as we know it, human, animal or vegetable, could not withstand the climate of Mars, might not life adapted to the climate flourish? The fabulous salamander lived in fire. An Eskimo, newly arrived in Moscut or Bagdad, could believe that since men could live in such places reptiles easily might bask upon live coals and frolic in flames. Why might not life, adapted thereto, exist in a temperature of 300 degrees above, or below, zero if a man from the polar regions can become acclimated in the tropics, or vice versa?—Louisville Courier-Journal.

TAKE HIGH OFFICE MARCH 4

That Day Officially Set for Inauguration of the President of the United States.

President Washington was inaugurated for his second term, beginning March 4, 1793, and all the other presidents, except four, who were inaugurated March 5, because the 4th fell on Sunday.

The four exceptions were Presidents Monroe, second term, 1821; Taylor, 1849; Hayes, 1877; and President Wilson's second term, 1917. President Hayes took the oath March 3, 1877, and was formally inaugurated on the following Monday. President Wilson took the oath for his second term on Sunday, March 4. The usual inauguration parade took place the next day.

The question as to whether, in the event of March 4 falling on Sunday at the beginning of a term, there being an interregnum of one full day in the office, was first brought by John Quincy Adams when he was secretary of state. He applied for a dictum of the Supreme court to guide the manner of inaugurating President Monroe for his second term. The opinion of Chief Justice Marshall does not prohibit the president from taking the oath and entering his duties immediately after midnight of March 3, even if March 4 falls on Sunday.

Rare Biblical Collection.

An interesting collection of Bibles, some of which are rare books, others of which are valuable on account of their former possessors or donors, is installed in the Mount Holyoke college library. In one group are found the ancient versions of the Scriptures; the original Hebrew and Greek, including a miniature copy of the scroll of the law, called the Sefer Torah, the ancient Syriac, the Septuagint and the Latin Vulgate.

Among the four editions of the Latin Vulgate is one bearing the date 1568, with Luther's portrait stamped on the leather cover with a Latin inscription, of which the translation is, "If you wish to see the face of Luther behold the portrait; if you would know his mind, consider the book."

"Insult to Injury."

Little do we realize when we use this expression that we are indulging in a bit of wisdom. Unknowingly we are alluding to the classic of the classic, an old Latin fable quoted by Phaedrus from the more ancient version of Aesop. It is a fable about a baldheaded man, and as usual the baldheaded man is at a disadvantage. In this case it is a mere fly that takes advantage of him. Well, the baldheaded man was bitten on the head by a fly and when he attempted in retaliation to smite the insect he succeeded only in giving himself a vigorous slap on his bald pate. Whereupon, according to Aesop, the fly said jeeringly: "You want to kill me for a touch—what will you do to yourself now that you have added insult to injury?"

Our First Person Singular.

Is not English the only great language in which the pronoun of the first person singular is capitalized? How monumentally imposing is that upper case "I." If a writer is egotistic the capitals stretch across his page like a colonnade. When he writes "we" he descends to the lower case. But this orthographic solipsism, mark you, is shared by Americans, Canadians, Australians, New Zealanders—all who use the English tongue. It is therefore not to be set down to insularity, but to individualism—a stark, ineradicable, valuable quality of these various folks whose thoughts and feelings have been nourished by the same language.—Henry Van Dyke in Scribner's Magazine.

CALL FOR "NIGHTCAP" CONFOUNDS HOTEL MAN

Official Relieved, Though, When the Guest Wants It On, Not In, the Head.

Eugene D. Miller, secretary and treasurer of the Pershing Square group of hotels, was finishing a busy day in the Biltmore in New York when his telephone rang and a man asked if the hotel could furnish a nightcap.

"It's not for me," he explained. "My wife wants it. She's subject to colds and wishes to take every precaution against this 'flu' epidemic."

Mr. Miller asked his married guest to hold the wire while he cast about for some means of providing the accommodations. Reluctantly he picked up the phone and said:

"I'm sorry, sir; there isn't drop in the house."

"But, I don't want—"

"Yes," interrupted Mr. Miller, sadly and soothingly, "and we should be very happy to be able to accomodate you, but every bit of our stock has been removed from the hotel and disposed of, weeks ago."

"I don't mean what you mean," said the married guest. "You are talking about a nightcap that goes to the head. I mean one that goes on the head; you know—the kind with ribbons and blue lace and all that sort of thing."

You know the rest.

CITY FOR WORKING WIVES

Johnstown, N. Y., One Place Where Nearly Everybody Works.

The labor department in Washington, after a survey of the cities of the country, found that 76 per cent of the women of Johnstown are contributors to the family income. This is the record for the country.

Mayor Chamberlain was asked to tell more about his city. He responded:

"The wives in Johnstown make gloves at home. More working people own homes in Johnstown than in nearly any other city. They are holders of large amounts of Liberty bonds.

"Wives whose husbands own their own homes and automobiles, work because they like it.

"The wages of men in this city vary from $25 to $60 a week. Chore men, without any experience, are being paid $4 a day, and boys leaving school get $3.50 per day.

"Living conditions in Johnstown are such that you cannot tell the workingman's wife from a business man's wife. Women take an interest in all civic enterprises."

MODERN "ENOCH ARDEN"

Comes Back and Will Get Wife Who Married Again.

"Enoch Arden" is home in Seattle permanently. This time "Enoch Arden" is Richard Sorensen, who enlisted early in the war and was reported "killed in action."

Mrs. Beulah Irene Sorensen, his wife and the mother of sixteen-year-old Allen Sorensen, waited hopefully for verification of her husband's death. It came in the form of letters from those who "saw him last." All hope apparently gone, Mrs. Sorensen was married June 17, 1919, to G. C. Jackson.

A few days ago a telegram reached her from New York and it was signed "Dick." The "killed in action" report was false. The two husbands left the choice to her. Her choice was "Dick," and she has started annulment proceedings against her second husband. The suit is an amicable one, it is understood.

TO TUNNEL MONT BLANC

Engineers Study Line to Join France and Italy.

French and Italian engineers have lately arrived at Chamonix, Switzerland, to make studies on the ground for a tunnel under Mont Blanc, directly joining France and Italy.

This project, which has been under examination for many years, now appears near attainment, as both governments have voted preliminary credits to commence work.

France has appropriated 45,000,000 francs and Italy 46,000,000.

DRUNKEN RATS DEFY POLICE

100 Stagger to Death From Liquor-Laden Sewer.

As though in open defiance of constitutional prohibition, 100 rats staggered bodily on wabbly legs into police headquarters at Duluth, Minn., less than 12 hours after constitutional prohibition became effective.

The rats were driven from the Duluth sewers by the thousands of gallons of liquor poured into the sewers by the police department. They came staggering out the big opening in the sewer made to carry the $30,000 in confiscated liquor emptied into them by the police.

Members of the police department killed the rats.

GREAT RECORD AT HOG ISLAND

Ninety-eight Vessels Are Launched at Shipyard in 20 Months.

611,575 TONS FOR THE YEAR

More Than 750,000 Tons Added to the Nation's Merchant Marine by Philadelphia Plant—Vessels Have Steamed One and a Half Million Miles Without Developing Any Structural or Workmanship Weakness.

Adding more than three-quarters of a million deadweight tons of steel ships to the new merchant marine of the United States in twenty months is the world's shipbuilding record established at the Hog Island shipyard at Philadelphia, when the ninety-eighth ship constructed by the American International Shipbuilding corporation recently was launched upon the waters of the Delaware.

The world's largest shipyard, according to figures compiled by the shipbuilding company, during the year ended March 31, 1920, launched a total of 611,575 deadweight tons of steel ships, or one vessel launched every twenty-nine working hours, and delivered 586,875 deadweight tons of steel ships, or one every thirty working hours.

Record at Hog Island.

The tonnage launched at the Hog Island yard from August 5, 1918, to date is 20 per cent of the total tonnage of steel ships launched from all the shipyards of the United States during that period, and is one-twelfth of the total deadweight tonnage of steel ships launched from all the shipyards of the United States for the Emergency Fleet corporation.

The eighty-three cargo carriers delivered to the shipping board by the Hog Island yard have received the highest rating of the American bureau of shipping and the shipping board inspectors, while fifty of the vessels also received the highest classification from Lloyd's bureau.

Hog Island vessels have steamed 1,500,231 miles and have carried 1,002,800 tons of cargo. Eleven rescues have been effected at sea by the Hog Island ships.

Gives Good Service.

The Quisconck, the first of the fabricated ships turned out, which was christened by Mrs. Woodrow Wilson in the presence of the nation's chief executive and a crowd of 100,000 persons, has a record of 60,000 miles steamed. After completing 37,500 miles the vessel was drydocked and carefully examined by shipbuilding experts, who found her intact. The bottom of the hull was scraped clean of barnacles and then repainted, and from the day of delivery, with this one exception, the vessel has been in constant service without showing any structural or workmanship weakness.

The figures issued by the shipbuilding company further show that the average daily working force during 1919 was 80,000, and the number of men employed 20,000, as of March 31, 1920. Rivets driven numbered 59,065,781, and 336,062 tons of steel were erected.

The Hog Island shipyard covers an area of 927 acres and has a frontage of two and one-quarter miles. There are thirty-six warehouses in the shipyard and eighty-two miles of railroad track. The floor space of the buildings cover 103 acres.

U. S. SELLS 3,000 PLANES

Army Air Service Disposes of Machines Below Cost.

The army air service between November 11, 1918, and February 27, 1920, sold 3,000 airplanes and 5,000 engines.

The receipts from planes were $1,343,963, or 9 per cent of the approximate cost; from engines, $2,063,618, or 19.5 per cent. The bulk of the sales were to the Curtiss company.

These figures were made public by the war department. They do not include 214 engines transferred to the navy or post office department and 11 foreign motors sold to schools.

Uncle Sam almost broke even in the sale of 26 L. W. F. planes with engines, the approximate cost of which was $327,000 and for which the air service received $321,000. These were serviceable planes in good condition.

SMALL BOY NURSE AND COOK

Seven-Year-Old Boy Administers Medicines and Prepares Meals.

When Mrs. William Bissell of Gunter, Kan., was suddenly taken ill with influenza no one could be obtained to care for her. The husband was miles away helping care for another family. Her seven-year-old son, Asa, was the only other person in the house. For three days the little boy prepared the meals, washed the dishes, made the fires, swept floors and administered the medicine that a physician had prescribed.

C. F. McCaffrey Files Candidacy for Re-election as Prosecuting Attorney

Prosecuting Attorney Charles F. McCaffrey filed today his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for re-election as prosecuting attorney. Mr McCaffrey has ably filled this office the past two years and made a good record. It has been the custom heretofore to re-elect the prosecuting attorney for the second term since the office is only for two years while nearly all of the other county offices are for a term of four years.

Mr. McCaffrey will have no opposition for the Democratic nomination. It is also thought that he will have no opponent on the Republican ticket.

OLD CLOCKMAKER BUILT WELL

Remarkable Timepiece in English Cathedral Said to Have Been Made About Year 1322.

Glastonbury, a town planned in the form of a cross and situated in the very center of Somerset, England, is full of ancient associations dating back, in legend and otherwise, to the early years of the Christian era. Early writers mention that Ynyswytryn, the ancient name of Glastonbury, was the place where the first church was built in which the gospel was preached. St. Philip, so the tradition is, sent Joseph of Arimathea in the year 60 with 11 disciples to Britain to preach the gospel. Averagus, the Roman viceroy, remarking that they had journeyed far and were of modest demeanor, gave each a hide of land, which was the origin of the Twelve Hides of Glastonbury.

One of the most interesting connections with Glastonbury is the ancient clock, which was at one time in the famous Glastonbury abbey, but is now in the north transept of Wells cathedral, Somerset, a few miles away. It is said to have been made by a monk named Peter Lightfoot about the year 1322. The dial plate is six feet six inches in diameter, and is contained in a square frame. The outer circle is divided into 24 parts intended to represent the 24 hours of the day. The numbers are in old English characters and mark hours from 12 noon to midnight, and thence to 12 midday. A large gilt star points to the hour. An inner circle shows the minutes, and a small star moves around the circle every hour. A third circle gives the age of the moon, and on a plate in this circle the phases of the moon are shown. There is also a smaller circle in which is a female figure, having around it the motto, "Sic peragrat Phoebe."

Above the dial plate is a paneled tower, around which knights on horseback revolve in opposite directions every hour on the striking of the clock, which revolution is meant to represent a tournament, a popular amusement in the middle ages. A figure, called Jack Blandivr, which is seated some distance from the clock, at a higher elevation, strikes with its heels every quarter of an hour against bells—two strokes at the first quarter, four strokes at the half hour, six at the third quarter, and eight strokes at the hour. It can also be made to strike with a hammer on a bell the number of the hour. Connected with the works of the clock, on the outside of the cathedral, two knights in armor strike with battle axes the quarters on bells. The works of the clock have been renewed; the original works are now in the patent office of the South Kensington museum fitted up and kept in motion.—Christian Science Monitor.
